

MUSEO NACIONAL DE COSTA RICA

We welcome you to the National Museum of Costa Rica, an institution that has been committed to the study and dissemination of the country's history, archeology and natural history since 1887. The building that houses the museum is the former Bellavista Military Barracks, where the national army was abolished in 1948.

GARDENS

The Museum's gardens reflect the diversity of ecosystems in the Central Valley. During your visit you can walk through a butterfly garden and see several pre- Columbian stone spheres in different green areas.

HISTORY OF COSTA RICA (XVI-XXI centuries)

Permanent exhibition

It shows the main economic, political, social and cultural facts of Costa Rica, from the time of Spanish contact and conquest of the national territory to the present day.

PRE-COLUMBIAN HISTORY

This room is temporarily closed for remodeling. Currently, it is being used to host temporary exhibits. Find a virtual tour with explanatory videos of the ancient pre-Columbian hall in the following link:

STONE MEMOIRES: monumentality in Costa Rica's pre-Columbian sculptures

TEMPORARY EXHIBITIONS

The National Museum has several areas for temporary exhibitions of an artistic, documentary and historical nature, including the following:

Commanders' Houses

These houses, built between the end of the 19th century and the beginning of the 20th century, were the residence of the first and second commanders of the Bellavista Barracks.

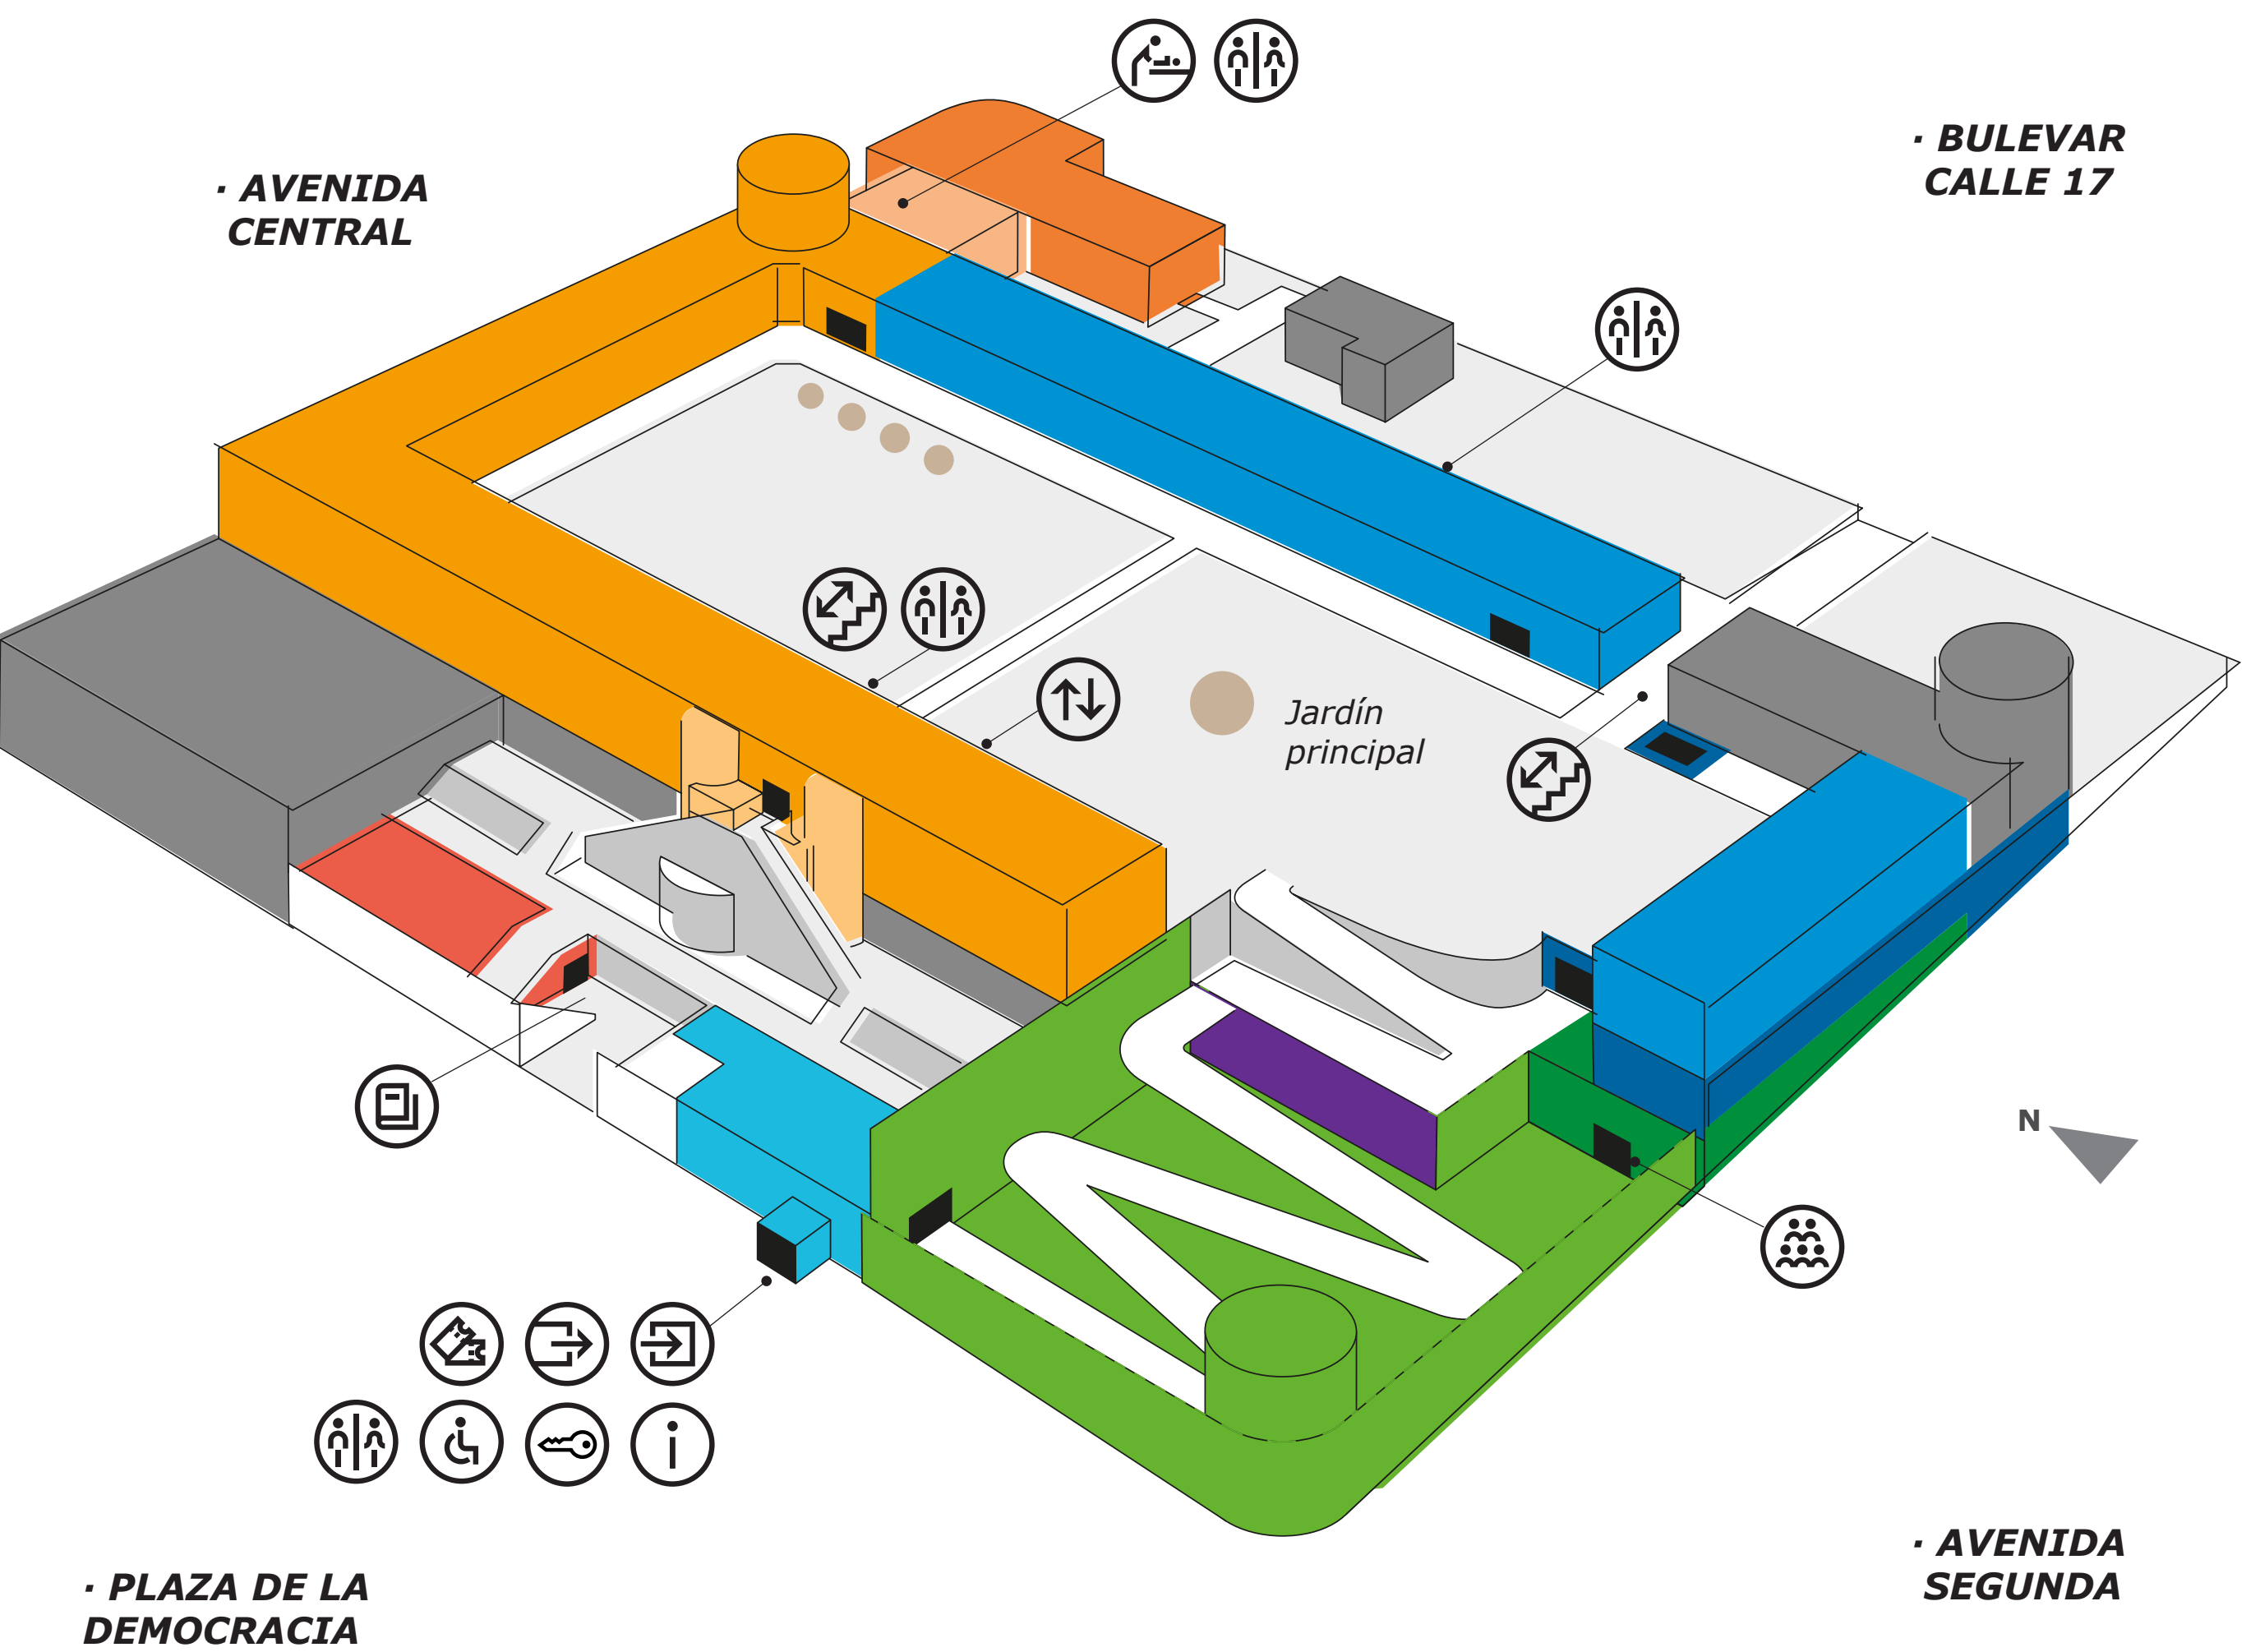

Dungeons

These are the old cells of the Bellavista Barracks. Graffiti of the prisoners from the 1940s stands out on the walls. You can also see the areas of the showers, toilets and the inside of the tower.

South Room

This space housed the sleeping quarters of the sergeants of the Bellavista Barracks.
